I chose to study Pharmacy at University because of my love of science. But I didn't come to fully appreciate the wide range of opportunities a science degree can offer until much later on in life after completing a PhD in Medicinal Chemistry, working as a University Lecturer and finally working for 28 years in R&D for a multinational American Pharmaceutical Company. In that time, I have been fortunate to have spent time with colleagues in Japan, the EU and the US, working on cutting edge science.

I became a Trustee over 10 years ago after being introduced to STEMPOINT by a colleague at MSD, who subsequently became the Managing Director of the STEMPOINT team prior to Helen Spencer taking the reins. I'm certain my engagement with the team was driven by my interest in the STEM subjects and by the excellent work in developing young scientists across Hertfordshire.

Four years ago I retired from MSD and was very pleased to accept the STEMPOINT Chair role, which has given me the opportunity to work closely with the Board of Trustees and Helen Spencer; who has grown the STEMPOINT team and now motivates young scientists across the whole of the East of England and London.
